“ Many thanks to everyone who've paid their respect to my mother, Nenita "Nene" Abendanio. My relationship with her was to quote Facebook , "It's complicated". As much as Mom & I loved each other it wasn't always easy; we had our ups and downs as mothers and daughters often do...

As Nene's firstborn, I was strong willed and quick to do as I wanted, even if it broke her heart, but she always forgave because a mother's love is enduring. She was my first teacher, but she did more than just teach me to read and write my name. Mom taught me how to love even when it hurt. She taught me the importance of family--we always celebrated my parents' wedding anniversary as the birth of our family.

My mother, Nene, was known by family and friends to be a phenomenal cook. She used to say you showed your love through food, unfortunately while I was a good student academically I was barely passing when it came to domesticate endeavors. I will never forget when I had to cook a family dinner with dessert as a homework assignment for Home Ec, Mom had to critic and send a note on how I did...she wrote "Beverly did her best. It was edible."

“ My cherished memories of Atsi Nene were our family gatherings. As mentioned she showed her love by making sure every family member is fed and comfortable. She was one to keep in touch with all the family members and kept everyone posted. She will be missed and her memories will always be in our hearts. Rest In Peace Atsi Nene. Love your cousin, Celeste Llamido
